The UNESCO 1997 Recommendation concerns status of higher education teaching personnel. EI would like to highlight, in particular, the following aspects of the Recommendation:

Academic freedom
Academic freedom is not an outdated privilege but an essential criterion for the development and circulation of knowledge. Both the State and the society must ensure that academic staff enjoys the conditions which allow them to exercise their mission without fear of repression and risk for their independence, their career and their life. Such conditions necessarily require the existence of a democratic environment.

Higher education teaching personnel are entitled to the maintaining of academic freedom, that is to say, the right, without constriction by prescribed doctrine, to freedom of teaching and discussion, freedom in carrying out research and disseminating and publishing the results thereof, freedom to express freely their opinion about the institution or system in which they work, freedom from institutional censorship and freedom to participate in professional or representative academic bodies. [Art. 27]

Collegiality
Higher education teaching personnel should enjoy the right and opportunity, without discrimination of any kind, according to their abilities, to take part in the governing bodies and to criticize the functioning of higher education institutions, including their own, while respecting the right of other sections of the academic community to participate, and they should also have the right to elect a majority of representatives to academic bodies. [Art. 31]

EI believes that the system of collegiality should be maintained even if opening up to the economic world is essential. EI opposes the general belief that universities can no longer be run by a collegial system of governance and regrets the direct appointment of rectors, deans and heads of department.

Security of employment
EI is concerned about the proliferation of short-term contracts and supports the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada which ruled that “academic staff should have a strong security of employment in order to enjoy the freedom required to maintain academic excellence, which is or should be distinctive of the university.”

Security of employment in the profession, including tenure or its functional equivalent, where applicable, should be safeguarded as it is essential to the interests of higher education as well as those of higher education teaching personnel. [...] Tenure or its functional equivalent, where applicable, should be safeguarded as far as possible even when changes in the organization of or within a higher education institution or system are made, and should be granted, after a reasonable period of probation, to those who meet stated objective criteria in teaching, and/or scholarship, and/or research to the satisfaction of an academic body, and/or extension work to the satisfaction of the institution of higher education. [Art. 40]

Collective bargaining and social dialogue
EI considers the lack of consultation with teachers organisations is an evident violation of Article 8 of the Recommendation. It is essential that academic staff is able to bargain their conditions of employment based on existing provisions.

Organizations which represent higher education teaching personnel should be considered and recognized as a force which can contribute greatly to educational advancement and which should, therefore, be involved, together with other stakeholders and interested parties, in the determination of higher education policy. [Art. 8]

Higher education teaching personnel should enjoy the right to freedom of association, and this right should be effectively promoted. Collective bargaining or an equivalent procedure should be promoted in accordance with the standards of the International Labour Organization. [Art. 52]
The UNESCO 1997 Recommendation concerning the Status of Higher Education Teaching Personnel > is the only international norm that applies to higher education teaching personnel, defined as "all those persons in institutions or programmes of higher education who are engaged to teach and/or to undertake scholarship and/or to undertake research and/or to provide educational services to students or to the community at large" (Article 1, paragraph f) > was adopted on consensus by the UNESCO General Conference on the 11th November 1997 > includes 77 articles, in 10 chapters, that cover the following areas:

• Rights and freedoms:
  ➤ Individual rights and freedoms: civil rights, academic freedom
  ➤ Self-governance and collegiality

• Duties and responsibilities of personnel

• Conditions of employment:
  ➤ Entry into the profession
  ➤ Security of employment
  ➤ Evaluation and discipline
  ➤ Negotiation of conditions of employment
  ➤ Salaries, workload, social security benefits, health and safety

The UNESCO 1997 Recommendation is World Teachers' Day. Created by UNESCO in 1994, this day was intended to better promote the UNESCO/ILO Recommendation adopted in 1966 for primary and secondary teaching staff. It is also the day for teachers working in the higher education sector, and a great opportunity to promote the Recommendation adopted for this sector by the UNESCO General Conference in 1997.

Higher education, more than ever, is challenged by rapid changes of the working life. Thus, a more unstable work situation is identified for higher education teaching personnel in all parts of the world. Commercialization and trading of higher education services combined with short-term and part-time contracts contribute to weaken the security of tenure and to lower the status of the teaching personnel, as well as it constitute a threat to academic freedom - of expression and to publish research results, and of the participation in governance of the institutions. Therefore, information activities about CEART’s work, provided by EI and other international teacher organizations, and disseminated through their networks, directly to the higher education teaching staff, is of utmost importance.

[Dr. Anne-Lise Hostmark-Tarrou – Norway]
Director, Centre for Research on Education and Work, Akershus College
Former President and Coordinator, Research Support Group of the Association for Teacher Education in Europe (ATEE)
Chairperson of CEART, 2003-2006

The 1997 UNESCO Recommendation is a blue print for sound educational policy for all regions of the world. In a period of expansion and renewal of post-secondary education, promotion of the Recommendation can be an effective means for improving higher education.

[Dr. Mark Thompson – Canada]
Professor Emeritus of Industrial Relations, Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration, University of British Columbia
Member of CEART

The [1997] Recommendation on the Status of Higher Education Teaching Personnel represents the formal acknowledgement by UNESCO’s Member States of the need to address common issues with regard to the status of higher education teaching personnel in all countries, through the application of common regulations without exceptions, despite the diversity of laws, regulations and traditions.

The fact that higher education sector is presently susceptible to market pressures and threats of commercialisation brought forth by the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS) and other trade agreements, calls for the urgent widespread distribution, publicity and application of the Recommendation.

Education International strongly suggests that the [1997] Recommendation be implemented in all countries.